This screen-shot shows a popup for the task "Search for Java Developers" TaskPrompt allows you to create a task popup, which you can use to quickly find a specific entry in a database. In the example, it is a task to search the job database for Java Developers, then apply for a job, call the employer, send a letter of introduction and so on. In the list, you can define your search criteria and search for an entry. You can specify that only the work keyword is allowed (in our example). You can enter various search commands (e.g. search, search for, search by) and switch between different filters (e.g. Job type, Job code, Location, Department, Icons). You can browse through the result list, go to a specific result, edit and change the details for that entry. You can repeat the search for another entry, go to the detailed view of a result, and so on. All details are entered in a popup dialog. When you are done, you can close the dialog and complete the task. The main advantage of this program is that you can create a detailed, hierarchical list of all your tasks. TaskPrompt Description: This screen-shot shows a popup for the task "Search for Java Developers" TaskPrompt uses a database engine to support a system of categories that you can use to organize your tasks. TaskPrompt allows you to create a large list of categories, then edit the details of each category, modify the settings, and apply them for later use. You can create as many categories as you need and assign each one a name and a description (which you can edit). To edit the settings, you go to the "Settings" menu and select the category. You can enable automatic due date reminders for the specified time and choose to be informed about all changes, only about completed changes, or only about cancelled changes. Also, you can specify a free amount of time that you want to leave a task "in review". In the "Settings" menu, you can select a different presentation mode, enable mass editing, assign a custom sound, manage popup windows and assign a hotkey for them, and more. This is a multi-user program. All users have their own copy of the database and can add and edit their own categories, changing their own settings. Users can use their own settings as standard ones.
