I am not looking to alter the actual output when I do so, i was just looking for an easy way to check that the output was what I needed, it seems a little fussy for what I want to do so I wanted an easy and reliable way to check the output. A: if the path is fixed for you then you can use: find -type f -name ".txt" That will find all files that match the pattern specified.. matches every directory of the current path. You can test the command on the command line, simply replace /path/to/the/directory with wherever you are storing your files. To find all files matching the name some.txt you would replace some.txt with the filename itself. If you cannot specify a fixed path, then you will need a bit more information, such as the expected file name. For example to include hidden files and directories you can use: grep --include=.txt -R ".*": Q: how to combine two database tables with $OR and $AND for multiple conditions This is a part of the result from the database i want to use it as multiple conditions in order to delete those alm-9630.txt files having the last-modified-time of (This month) and to delete those alm-9650.txt files having the last-modified-time of (next month) Here is the php code mysql_connect("$localhost", "$username", "$password"); @mysql_select_db($db_name) or die("Unable to select database"); $SQL="SELECT t1.`inford`, t1.`filename`, t1.`filecount`, t2.`filename`, t2.`filecount`, t3.`last-modified-time`, t3.`MTime` FROM `alm-9630.txt` t1, `alm-9650.txt` t2, `file` t3 WHERE (t1.`MTime` = "This month" AND t2.`MTime` = "next month") AND t3.`filepath` = `alm-9630.txt` OR (t1.`MTime` = "This month" AND t2.`MTime` = "next month") d0c515b9f4
