GiliSoft Audio Recorder Pro is an application for creating and recording sound files from any audio. It has been called "Google's secret plan to send your data to China" and "a villainous merger" by the Australian opposition. But one former Google executive has said he supported the union for the realisation of Google's dream of "total global domination". In 2012, a coalition of anti-trust activists and European Commission officials launched an investigation into allegations that Google had abused its dominant position in search by unfairly promoting its own products and demoting those of its rivals. The case was dismissed in July 2015. Now a group of former Google executives have published a book, Master Plan: Google's Road to World Domination, in which they defend their employer by arguing the case was wrongly brought and has been dismissed. The book, coauthored by Matt Sullivan, described the anti-trust case as a "lunatic fringe" and said the "solaris" - a reference to the solar system - who pushed for the action were "anti-Google hysterics". The book has angered some Google employees and is likely to fuel further accusations that the search giant was attempting to tighten its grip on the market for internet services. "Google is no closer to achieving its goal of total global domination than when the scandal started," the authors wrote. "If not for the 'solaris', Google would have achieved its grand plan years ago." The authors - including founding Google vice president Jason Jones, former YouTube chief Steve Chen and former Google Australia CEO Barry Haigh - argue the campaign was a "wacky business stunt from the start" and those who brought the action were "overreaching zealots". 'The solaris' are a "collection of Google enemies," the authors wrote. "They are so in love with Google's success, they are unable to let the company's greatest achievement go unpunished." The book describes the solaris as a coalition of anti-trust activists including Tim Wu, the Columbia law professor who coined the term "net neutrality". Wu was also the inspiration for Google's cofounders Larry Page and Sergey Brin. The authors described the "solaris" as a "collection of Google enemies" and said those who brought the case were "overreaching zealots".
