Chronic administration of tetracycline to growing rats for 30 days at the maximum recommended dosage (100 mg/kg body weight/day) resulted in decreased concentrations of plasma total calcium and osteocalcin. To determine whether the observed changes were due to tetracycline, two groups of tetracycline (100 mg/kg) treated growing rats received either 100 micrograms/kg of tetracycline or 100 mg/kg of tetracycline and 100 micrograms/kg of phosphate daily from 1 to 30 days of age. In comparison to age and weight-matched controls, growth was not different in either of these experimental groups. The results from the study show that the
